RASHTRAPATI BHAVAN

NEW DELHI-4

March 22, 1972.

I am glad to know that the Indian Council of Historical Research will be inaugurated on the 27th March, 1972.

Historical research is of fundamental importance to a nation like India which is rich in history. A proper historical perspective is necessary to understand the real significance of the great many political, social and economic changes that are taking place in the presentday world. I send my best wishes for the success of the work of the Council and its inaugural ceremony.

PRIME MINISTER'S HOUSE
NEW DELHI

MESSAGE

The establishment of the Indian Council of Historical Research is welcome. I hope this will encourage objective and scientific research in various aspects of our history. People must be made aware of the influences which have moulded them over thousands of years so as to be able to face the problems of change without losing their moorings.

It is up to historians to give vision to people. Vision can be sustained only if the study of history is freed from the shackles of an artificially created framework. The history of India is far too identified with political or cultural conflicts. There seems little concern with the people themselves, with the forces of change in society, and the processes of culture. Sometimes mere chauvinism and blind acceptance of the past passes off as a re-interpretation of history.

Our approach to history must be rigorously scientific. Historical analysis should take account of the whole complex of interaction between the economic, political, intellectual and technological factors.

I hope that the work of our historians will add to our knowledge and to our understanding of ourselves.

New Delhi,
March 19, 1972.

ESTABLISHMENT OF THE INDIAN COUNCIL OF HISTORICAL RESEARCH

The importance of giving a proper direction to historical research and of encouraging and fostering objective and scientific writing of history is being increasingly recognised in the country. The subject gains not only from the point of view of national integration but also from that of the need to inculcate a healthy respect for our cultural heritage without encouraging a blind acceptance of superstition, obscurantism and revivalism.

2. It is equally important to promote the application of historical method to the study of the social sciences and the humanities, so that an inter-disciplinary approach is achieved in an understanding of these subjects. The development and adoption of new historical methods have a bearing not only for the study of history but in improving and updating techniques and methods of social sciences and humanities as a whole.

3. It was felt that an Indian Council of Historical Research which would be an autonomous body registered under the Societies Registration Act would help in achieving these objectives and in enunciating and implementing a national policy of historical research. After some preliminary discussion on the subject, a Working Group was set up in December, 1971 by the Ministry of Education, to work out the details of such a body, its objectives, functions and organisational set-up. The Group consisted of Prof. R.S. Sharma, Patna University (Chairman); Prof. Satish Chandra, Jawaharlal Nehru University; Prof. Tapan Raychaudhuri, Delhi University; Dr. S. N. Prasad, Director, National Archives; Shri J. Veeraraghavan, Director (Internal Finance), Ministry of Education and Social Welfare; and Smt. S. Doraiswami, Deputy Education Adviser, Ministry of Education and Social Welfare.

4. The objectives of this new body would be to:

- bring historians together and provide a forum for exchange of views between them;
- give a national direction to an objective and rational presentation and interpretation of history;
- promote, accelerate and coordinate research in history with special emphasis on areas which have not received adequate attention so far;
- promote a coordinated and balanced distribution of research effort over different areas;
- elicit support and recognition for historical research from all concerned and ensure the necessary dissemination and use of results.

5. The frame-work within which the new body would function will be as follows:

- (a) The Indian Council of Historical Research should be a small-sized body consisting mainly of eminent historians of the country.
- (b) The proposed Council would cover History in its broader aspect including the History of Art, Literature and Philosophy and allied subjects such as archaeology, numismatics, epigraphy and the historical study of manuscripts. It would promote the study of any subject with a strong historical bias and content.
- (c) It would be necessary to ensure that the new council does not duplicate the functions at present carried out by the Indian Historical Records Commission.
- (d) Several historical projects with a strong social and economic content are at present being assisted by the Indian Council of Social Science Research. The establishment of the Indian Council of Historical Research should not deprive these projects of this assistance nor should similar projects be excluded from the per-view of the I.C.S.S.R. in future.
- (e) The Member-Secretary of the I.C.S.S.R. should be invited to attend the meetings of the I.C.H.R. on a reciprocal basis in order to maintain coordination between the two.

The Memorandum of Association and the Rules of the Indian Council of Historical Research prepared on the basis of the above frame-work and as approved and registered are given in the pages that follow.
